About the Study:

The researchers from Ashoka University, the University of Virginia, and the University of Notre Dame aim to evaluate the impact of SkillReBoot, a skilling program developed by the JobsForHer Foundation (JFH) to assist women with career breaks in re-entering the workforce.

About the Role:

As an enumerator, you will conduct telephonic interviews with female candidates who have enrolled for the SkillReBoot program. You will report your progress to your supervisor, and you can contribute to improving the questionnaires by sharing your feedback and suggestions.

Key Responsibilities:

- Conduct telephonic interviews as per a daily calling schedule.
- Report progress to the supervisor.
- Help candidates or respondents understand the study and answer their questions.
- Improve questionnaire design by providing suggestions and feedback, if any.

Eligibility:

- Ability to speak and understand English, as all the interviews will be conducted in English. Knowledge of another language is advantageous.
- Bachelor's degree in any discipline.
- Comfortable with using Google Sheets or Microsoft Excel.
- Passionate about research and women empowerment.
- Detail-oriented, great communication skills, and ability to give and take feedback.

Benefits:

- Remote and flexible working environment.
- Certificate of completion upon successful delivery of work.
- Training and hands-on experience to conduct quantitative interviews.
- An opportunity to kick-start your career in research and development.
